About Mediation

Mediation is a method of dispute resolution involving a neutral third party who aids the parties in reaching a mutually agreeable solution. The process of mediation is purely voluntary, collaborative in nature, and confidential. Nothing can be imposed upon a party against his or her will at any time.

The benefits of mediation over litigation as a means to dispute resolution include:

- Cost savings
- More rapid settlements
- More flexible process
- More satisfactory and creative outcomes
- Higher rate of compliance
- Better preservation of relationships
- Improvement of participants' communication and conflict resolution skills
